Critical Incidents in Places of Worship Providing Effective Crisis Support

The faith-based communities have long been responders to disaster and emergencies, providing needed care to those impacted. Recent events both in the US and internationally highlight the need for crisis services for those very faith-based communities when events impact their staff and volunteers.

This workshop will address providing crisis services for places of worship, with an emphasis on caring for the staff, spiritual leadership, and worshipers as potential groups needing services.

Program Highlights:

- Enhance crisis support for places of worship
- Common psychological reactions to critical incidents in places of worship
- Recommendations for providing support in faith-based venues
- Prepare crisis teams to provide support in faith-based venues
- Assessment of crisis needs in places of worship following a critical incident
- Specific target groups in places of worship
- Working with places of worship before, during, and after a crisis event
- Lessons learned from case studies of recent episodes of violence in places of worship

Successful completion of the Approved Instructor Candidate Program will allow you to teach this curriculum to others. Continuing education will be required to maintain your instructor status.
